There when our neighbors need us most.

Melanie candidly shares that she has found herself in a situation she never anticipated: taking care of her husband as he suddenly readjusts to life with the diagnosis of Stage IV pancreatic cancer.

Prior to his diagnosis, her husband was working and would get food from local pantries to help ends meet. Their diets have also had to change to protect his health.

"I love the vegetables. He's got onset of diabetes from the pancreatic cancer. So, the vegetables and the beans and all that other stuff that I can make meals with I appreciate, because he has to have a high protein diet now to build up his strength in his body. Without these, I think a lot of people wouldn't be eating and doing things. It's a blessing. It's beautiful. I love it."
